

Snow on Satellite!

The satellite picture late this morning showed very few clouds over Kentucky. This lack of clouds allowed for a great picture of where snow still remains on the ground. This axis of snowfall on the satellite picture lines up very well with where the heaviest snow/sleet accumulations were from the March 2-3, 2014 winter storm.

